Enabling Agile and DevOps implementation with migration to QMetry's Test Management tool aided by our Business Partner Infostretch.

NextEra Energy is a Fortune 200 energy company based out of USA with initiatives in renewable energy. With multiple businesses and processes at various stages in their digital transformation journey, they required a DevOps friendly test management tool that supported their existing tool-stack.

Business Challenges

NextEra Energy has several business units with many processes which are at various stages in the digital transformation journey. Their existing legacy tool IBM rational was not enough to manage the need of Agile and DevOps methodologies. They faced integration challenges with tools like Jira, Jenkins and other automation tools. Moreover, the existing tool was clunky, having big infrastructural footprint, with high maintenance needs and not user friendly.

With QMetry Test Management QA Teams at NextEra has now got reusability, open API integrations, simple test authoring and execution, deep traceability and test coverage, and customizable reports and dashboards that offer actionable insights.

Our Approach

1 QMetry's Agile and DevOps ready test management product fit the bill perfectly for NextEra.

2 The onboarding was quick with our support team's training and jumpstart sessions that enabled NextEra teams to adapt its use for both Agile and Waterfall processes.

3 Infostretch built the POC to demonstrate multi-process and cross functional integrations in QMetry. They implemented QMetry Agile and DevOps Ready Test Management.

4 Apart from help with the initial project setup, our support team provided extensive training and assistance with the visual analytics report.

Impact
